

fashion and textile design from sketchpad to catwalk. It covers topics such as design, textiles, fashion illustration, garment construction and garment styling. There are separate workshops for life drawing, colour study, painting, jewellery design, textile technology, accessories including millinery and shoe design, fashion photography and history of fashion.

Central to the school's philosophy is a concept of the artist-teacher. All teaching staff are employed part-time so they are able to pursue their professional careers alongside their teaching. This system ensures that the students are taught by a variety of individuals who offer different perspectives. All teachers place high value on entrepreneurship, determination and the students' willingness to look at the chosen subject with a fresh eye and an enquiring and critical mind.

When asked what they most enjoyed about the programme, many graduates refer to the extensive variety of art-based classes which have helped them to release their creativity, and the fact that teaching staff place a strong emphasis on experimenting and exchanging ideas. Graduates of the Cracow School of Art and Fashion Design go on to enjoy fulfilling careers in many different aspects of the fashion industry, from running cutting-edge boutiques to working in large international enterprises. Many also set up their own workshops, and achieve independence and respect as professionals, selling their unique skills and work. This year, the Cracow School of Art and Fashion Design will open its doors to international students, offering them attractive conditions of admission. While all art and fashion workshops are conducted in Polish, English may be used to communicate with teachers and other students. ■
